

Edith Gould's Own Story of the Life of an Heiress

WEEK-END PARTIES OF RICH FOLK

Even Favors for Parties Cost Fortune. Edith Gould Reveals In Recollections

By EDITH GOULD WAINWRIGHT, Chapter IX.

MARJORIE's coming-out party, discussed in the preceding chapter, was the inauguration of a series of balls and dinners given at Georgian Court and No. 837 Georgian Court. During the week these parties were given in the city home, and week-ends found the theatre of operations transferred to Georgian Court.

At the Lakewood place there were usually twenty to thirty guests who remained from Friday night until Monday morning. These were much less formal than the high society affairs because the regular and Sunday holidays afforded the men complete relaxation from their college and business duties.

When I say that there were twenty or thirty guests, I do not mean that we provided only for that number, because each guest could bring with him or her a social servant whom we also had to accommodate. Besides, we took care also of at least a dozen belonging to the guests, the animals were for the most part sick, Postage and Belgian officers. One young football star the day through down a leg, and this animal had to be segregated from the other guests because of his too strenuous playfulness.

Like the collins, these whole week-end parties have soon their day. I don't mean to imply that there are no longer week-end affairs, but guests now refrain from descending upon their hosts with a company of servants. That happy, free-handed hospitality has become narrowed itself much as apartment house living has connected social activity generally.

It was not much of a problem to entertain visitors at Georgian Court. There was a swimming pool for those who cared for aquatic sports, the tanhans indoor driving rink for the equestrian and a splendid stable of horses, a nine-hole golf links, squash and tennis courts and a moving picture projection machine, the screen being hung in the large living room. For those who cared to read there was the big library with its comfortable, deep upholstered chairs. We always tried to make every guest feel that he could do exactly what he pleased. There was no set program and no champagne and dinner. It was never insisted that guests play bridge or participate in amateur theatricals or do anything else that pleased the hosts.

It was at one of these week-end parties that Marjorie became engaged to Anthony J. Drexel, Jr., of Philadelphia. Formal announcements of the betrothal was made continued on Page 4, Column 1.

GIVES VOTE TO G. O. P. TO SPITE CRITIC

Miss Isabelle Abraham O'Neill is a Democrat in the Rhode Island Assembly, earnest and serious in her work. But when her party leader became scathing in his estimate of the ability of women in politics, she just changed her mind—and cast her vote with the Republican side.

FIND YOUNG GIRL DIED SUICIDE BY CYANIDE

Springfield, April 1.—Miss Doris Kellogg, the nineteen-year-old daughter of the chief engineer of the United Electric Light Company, committed suicide by taking cyanide, the medical examiner revealed today.

When the girl died, a week ago, there was no hint of suicide. The medical examiner verdict today took even the police by surprise.

Miss Kellogg, who lived with her parents at No. 110 Yale street, was employed as a stenographer by the Springfield Gas Light Company.

Parents and friends refused to speculate as to the cause of her self-destruction today.

MINISTER HITS BACK AT HIS BISHOP

Providence, April 1.—Asserting that he was transferred to Taunton because "knew too much" about his own conditions, the Rev. Kenneth H. Smith of East Greenwich denied today the contention of Bishop William H. Anderson of the Methodist Episcopal Church that the Rev. Mr. Smith was of limited education.

Bishop Anderson was quoted as saying that the removed minister was transferred because of unsuitability of his educational qualifications.

TELLS OF HIS SCHOOLING. To this, the Rev. Mr. Smith retorted today that he is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University, one of the leading Methodist educational institutions of the nation, a peer graduate of Des Moines University.

Before entering the ministry, Smith taught school for ten years and was a superintendent of schools in Iowa.

Bishop Anderson branded the minister's charge that his transfer resulted from political influence, as "ridiculous."

MINIST SHOWS HIS PROOF.

Dr. E. W. Lellan, superintendent of the Providence district, declared that the Rev. Smith, through his "serious charges against some of the members of the church, has rendered himself entirely liable for such statements, unless he has no questionable evidence to support his charges."

"Mr. Smith made such statements to me several days ago and I have received fullest information from him and from his ardent supporters, but not one line of evidence has been presented to me that supports such a contention," he added.

Woman Democrat Presents Criticism of Sex and Ballots With G. O. P. Forces

Providence, April 1.—(Woman) an, scorned, stood in the flow of Representatives, and with flashing eyes, faced the tiny men numbered among her colleagues, retaliating in a dramatic manner for satirical jibes at women interested in public questions.

The defender of her sex was Miss Isabelle Abraham O'Neill, representative from Providence, and the past against whom her scorching words were directed was her own Democratic party leader, Representative Francis B. Condon, of Central Falls.

ASSAULT ALL WOMEN. The dramatic interchange came during a heated debate on the original bill, creating a monitoring agency force a Republican measure recently passed by the House with a 49 to 26 vote.

Minority Leader Condon, dwelling on the activity of women in favor of the legislation, attacked Mrs. Harvey J. Platt, leader of the Women's Rhode Island Committee for Law Enforcement, and in a satirical and desecrated his remarks to include all women interested in public affairs.

TEARS FROM PARTY VOTE.

When he had concluded, Mrs. O'Neill rose and declared that his remarks had swung her doubtful vote over against her leader and in favor of the bill. "I'd like to impress upon the men of the General Assembly and the men of the State, that women are not interested in the question of the creation of citizens of the State has fallen, it is the fact of the matter."

"I have been treated with scorn and again by your men's attitude toward women. Why shouldn't we make an answer? We are the mothers of our soldiers."

HYDE PARK MERCHANT ROBBED OF $850 IN STORE

George Weinstein, aged thirty-four years old, proprietor of a fashionable store at 1224 Hyde Park avenue, Hyde Park, reports that a man entered his place at midnight, pulled an evened over his head, secured a revolver at him, and made away with $850.

Weinstein says that he had extinguished the store lights, preparing to close, when a man about thirty-five years old entered. He asked for a package of cigarettes. The storekeeper says that he was handed an open revolver, pulled over his head and when he got it off he found himself facing a robber.

POLICE BEGIN LISTING ALL BOSTON VOTERS

Police lists of all Boston inhabitants are being compiled, having reached the age of twenty years, today, this being April 1. If the John Law in his mind and leave doubt, ask you questions today in prepared for him tomorrow in the next day, for he will be around eventually. Only those persons qualified to become voters will go into this listing. It was intended originally that the persons who take all inhabitants, for the national census, but in the belief that confusion would result, that plan was dropped. The Federal census listing will come later.

SMALLPOX SCARE IN CENTRAL FALLS, R. I.

Providence, April 1.—Smallpox is spreading in Central Falls, Rhode Island, where it has been reported that it has been found in several cases in the same section of the town, four of them were particularly severe. Dr. Penick believes the disease is being spread by some person carrier who probably is not sick at all.

Coolidge, Sr., Has Quit Selling Maple Sugar

Chicago, April 1.—John Coolidge, father of the President, is no longer in the maple-sugar business, he has written to Mrs. J. D. Knapp of Joliet, Ill., who asked him for prices. The President's father wrote: "I have let my lot. Walter H. Lynds makes nice sugar or syrup and can tell you price of either delivered at your place to parcel post. Respectfully, John C. Coolidge."

Organization headed by Will Hays.

The Criminal Department of America, holding company of the De Mille Organization, announced that it had secured Cecil B. De Mille for the Boston Evening American, at North Beverly, on the night of March 10.

Your young men living in East Boston and the North End are held in total bail of $100,000 pending trial in Salem District Court.

With residents and officials of North Shore cities and towns co-operating as far as possible, State Commissioner of Public Safety Alfred Fox is determined to continue the investigations until all gangsters suspected of looting scores of North Shore homes are reached.

RAIL PLACED HIGH.

The high ball in the holding of the four men by the Salem court was the cause of some comment, both by railroad and the bench.

You might as well make it a million dollars," declared Attorney Henry Gilman, for one defendant, when the $25,000 bail figure was announced.

"I would hold them in that amount if they stole that much," retorted Judge Sears. "The public has some right to protection. We are having too many of these cases of late."

ONE HELD AS WITNESS.

The five men arrested are F. Campbell of No. 224 Charles street, East Boston; J. Frank O'Boyle of No. 122 Jordan street, East Boston; Jerry Gelsdorf, alias Bishop, alias "Three"; the Duke of Cambridge, Louis M. Galt and Walter Garabedian of East Boston.

The breaking and entering and larceny by John Trevelyan, Garabedian were dropped, however, and he was held in $2500 bail as a material witness.

Because high bail usually acts as a deterrent to the criminal, officials of law enforcement, it is believed that the case of the Andrews house breakers, the first captured by a drive against North Shore marauders, will constitute a check on burglar activities.

PROHIBITION UNIT TO FUNCTION IN NEW HAVENS

Washington, April 1.—The function of the prohibition unit and removed today from the office of Assistant Secretary Mac is that of Assistant Secretary Andrews, who succeeded Eliot Walsworth.

More will continue administration of the Internal Revenue Bureau under which the prohibition unit heretofore has functioned.

The month will be a close supervision by high Treasury officials of the operations of the Internal Revenue Bureau in enforcing the prohibition unit in enforcing the Volstead act.

Lack of co-operation between the prohibition unit and the Internal Revenue Bureau in enforcing the prohibition act has been alleged.

Alexander W. George was sworn in as collector of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, succeeding Nelson T. Hartson, resigned.

GIRL ARTIST BLINDED, PARALYZED BY HOOCH

Isabel Gordon, twenty-one, an artists' model, living at the Thelma Alphin, Tremont street, Boston, is in the Waltham Hospital, totally blind and her left arm and right hand paralyzed as the result of drinking poisonous liquor while on a party with her cousin and a number of young men at a lakeview section of Waltham.

The woman, Mary Gordon, twenty-one, who was found in a semi-conscious condition, was held in $1000 bail in Waltham District Court today (charged with being drunk, both girls were placed in a semi-conscious condition in Waltham.

"We had some drinks at a house in Waltham and after that I don't remember anything," Miss Gordon said in court.

BANKBOOK FOR $60,000 FOUND ON SLAIN MAN

New York, April 1.—The body of a man, containing two bullet wounds and believed to be that of Mark Fawcett of St. Louis, was found in a rooming house in the narrow area-way of an upper Park avenue apartment. In a pocket was found a wrist-book bankbook showing deposits of $60,000.

When you drink coffee Drink GOOD Coffee

Today anyone who drinks coffee can afford to drink the best.

Because today, even the cheapest coffee costs almost as much as the best and the quality of the cheaper grades was never poorer.

You know what this means to you, Mrs. Housewife.

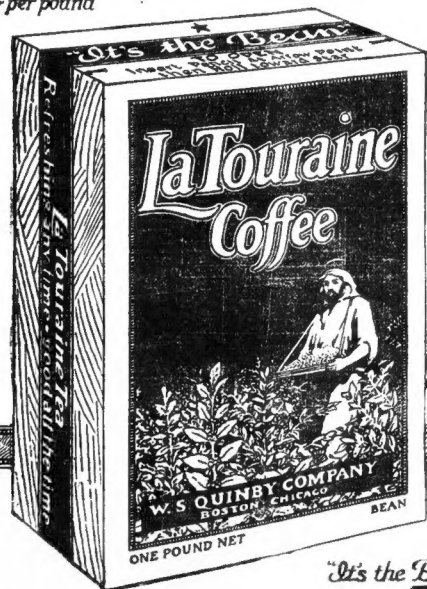

You know from experience that real satisfaction in anything you buy comes only when you make sure of real quality.

Coffee is no exception. And you'll find that La Touraine Coffee not only stands for complete satisfaction but, in the end, is more economical, too. Its use over a reasonable period will prove this fact to you.

Use Percolator—Grind the Touraine as fine as granulated sugar. You'll enjoy La Touraine the percolator way, but La Touraine is always good—even when made over a camp fire in an ordinary tomato can.

Buy it in the bean and grind it fresh as you use it, or ask your grocer to grind it for you. Then you'll get all the goodness and flavor inherent in the fine blending and roasting of the famous La Touraine formula—the secret of La Touraine quality.

MATERIALISM SINCE THE WORLD WAR

By DR. FRANK CRANE

BOOKS are now being published which represent the feeling at the close of the War.

I have just recently seen a book which contains all of the moral slump that came over the world after the War. It tries to give expression to the vein of post-war pessimism which is undoubtedly on the increase.

The hero, a ruthless materialist, finds everything turns to ashes in his mouth. He makes money and finds it valueless. He loves, but finds that he can live easily without it. He acquires power, but discovers no use for it.

It is "Ecclesiastes" brought up to date, but it does fill me with misgivings to see so many people whose philosophy is so arid that they care for nothing.

It is as silly to dwell upon the impermanence of human delights as it is to pretend they are permanent. The theory advocated by Browning that a man should wait for something, but that it doesn't matter what that something is, has a great deal to recommend it.

In war time we took things seriously. There were prizes to be won and battles to be fought. But there is danger that after this shall come the reaction when we take nothing seriously.

No war can be fought without a great deal of idealism for men will not throw away their lives for nothing.

From the peak of this idealism it is natural that we may slump into materialism and that pessimism should be rampant for awhile. But this cannot last, for the pessimist is not a true interpreter of life.

The only unforgivable offense a man can commit against life is to cease caring. For to live at all is to care, that is, it is to value the ideals above all things.

Doubtless in time the pendulum will soon swing back and the present's drop into materialism, pessimism and indifference, will be succeeded by the rise in interest in all things.

HOUSE WILL TAKE UP BUDGET VETO TOMORROW

Speculation is rife at the State House today as to whether or not the members of the joint legislative committee on Ways and Means will go to the mat with Governor Fuller over his veto of various items in the budget bill.

Today Representative Shattuck, chairman of the House committee, indicated that his committee will fight all along the line and will make every effort to override the Governor's veto.

The vote will come up at 11 o'clock tomorrow in the House, and there is a general feeling that the present wave of wrath will have subsided by that time.

Spring Find You Tired and Achy?

Very Often This Condition Is Due to Imperfect Elimination.

HAS winter left you throbbing backache and stabbing, rheumatic twinges? Do you get up lame and stiff; drag through the day, weak, nervous—all tired out?

Have you given any thought to your kidneys? Winter, you know, is apt to be hard on the kidneys. One eats heavier food, drinks less water, and takes less exercise. Add, then, the strain of winter's colds and chills, and it's little wonder the kidneys weaken and allow body poisons to upset blood and nerves.

That's why spring is apt to find so many folks feeling tired and worn out; miserable with constant backache, headaches, dizziness and annoying kidney irregularities.

Authorities agree that good health is largely a matter of good elimination. If you believe your kidney action is deficient, why not try Doan's Pills. Doan's are a stimulant direct to the kidneys—are publicly recommended by thousands. They have helped many Boston people. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say These Boston People:

C. P. LAWLESS, 349 Tremont St., says: "When a cold settled in my kidneys, I came down with backache. When I straightened up after stooping, I had a stitch through my kidneys, and my work was hard. I used Doan's Pills and they rid me of the trouble." The above statement was given March 25, 1920, and on February 9, 1921, Mr. Lawless added: "My former statement recommending Doan's Pills holds good, for Doan's cured me permanently."

MRS. T. FLOAT, 124 Euclid St., says: "I felt all out of sorts when my kidneys got out of order, and there wasn't much I could do about the house. The next week tired me out and made my back weak and lame. There was a tired feeling across my back, and I never rested well. When I stooped over sharp pains became more intense. I also had dizzy spells, and headaches usually followed. Doan's Pills cured me of the attack."

The Sophisticated Lady Considers the Ensemble Situation

Ensembles and Insomnia

Eight white squares yawned in a row, and the definition was "style." Fashion recklessly ran her pencil through her marble, she hadn't been able to sleep for thinking about her Spring cross-word puzzle. "Ensemble!" she yawned triumphantly. And thus it started. Having uttered the soft-saying word, she liked the sound of it so well she applied it to everything possible. "Ensemble! This Ensemble!" she has been her international anthem this season, and there's very little—useful or ornamental—that has escaped her vigilance! As always, Jordan Marsh Company can be depended upon to interpret the best and the smartest of the mode. Whether you are interested in the Ensemble costume in its many phases of matching frock and coat, or Ensemble jewelry, furniture, etc., you may be sure of finding it in its authorized varieties here.

The United States of Costuming

Everything that can match does in the smart costume today, and you'll be amazed at the ingenuity of the Ensemble. Hats are attended by chic scarves that agree in every detail. Some inspired-by-Paris hats have a cape to complete the Ensemble notion. Fastidious women find gloves with insets of gay color to correspond to hats, scarves and pocket-books.

To Second the Motion

Even evening wraps must be within the "law" to be smart, one finds. If the evening frock votes for figured chiffon, the evening wrap may second the motion, and add a border of fur for emphasis. Not contented with close harmony all during the day, the smart woman carries her Ensemble into the night. Bizarre and lovely are the pajamas of vivid crepe, which bring with them their jaunty "top-coat" lounging robe ($45.00).

Lock Yourself In!

And what's more to the point, lock your money in! This is provided for in the big and best Ensemble, which may be mated from their respective sections. They may be had in patent or fancy leather, each with the cunning little key to secure the treasure—whether yourself or your allowance!

Other Ensemble belts carry out their idea in smart little wristlets in many bright colors (2.50 a set).

"Consistency, Thy Name Is Woman!"

Whatever has been masculinely proclaimed about the inconsistency of women, the Ensemble denies it effectively. The feminine mind does like logic, and what could be more logical than making the parts of an outfit agree with each other in design? Perhaps that's why our Drapery Advisory Bureau has been called upon to help so many women establish unity between rugs, pillows, hangings, and new upholstery for old-loved chairs.

For Becoming Breakfasts

Even in the breakfast room (which may be the luncheon and dinner room as well in small apartments) the Ensemble has invaded. Painted breakfast sets, as adorable as doll furniture come true, may be found in the colors one likes to work out in creosote and gay prints for perky little house dresses. Even the dainty fruit designs pretend they have been applied on the backs of the chairs! Several ambitious little homemakers have assembled Ensembles of furniture, window curtains, wall paper and house trunks.

To a Logical Conclusion

And where will it lead, this Ensemble enthusiasm? It's stretched its imagination broadly already, but who knows where it will stop? Perhaps we may have Ensemble Families next, with Mother and Daddy and all the young 'uns matching punctiliously!

Here's another good opportunity, Limerick fans! Six extra prizes are offered by the Boston Evening American for clever solutions to Limerick No. 39, printed in today's paper.

These prizes consist of six pairs of best orchestra seats to "Little Jossie Jones," an unusually clever and timely musical comedy, now playing at the Wilbur Theatre on a return engagement. Each pair of seats is valued at $2.50.

Among the persons responsible for the success of this charming play are John Sully, Playhouse Director, Madison Grey, Playhouse Director, John Hunsley, At Raymond, Clark Thropp, Laura Hamilton and Evan Vahanian.

NOTE TO OLD TO WIN. Isabel Stiles Lynch of 153 Union street, Lynn, is not the only 77-year-old woman who is participating regularly in the daily limerick tournament. Another of exactly the same age, who is a regular fan, is Josephine V. Branton, of Canute Farm, Somersworth, N. H. She is already numbered among the prize winners. No day passes that Mrs. Branton does not send in "last lines" for the daily jingle.

The limerick relating to fake jewelry auction, showed many a use of simile. K. F. Collins, wrote: "I am positively a new member of the Boston Evening American family, having subscribed to your paper about six weeks ago, and I could resist an attempt at this limerick, not so much as I would expect a prize as my answer fits me to perfection.

FILL IN "CHATTER CASTLE." "I am deeply interested in your campaign against 'fake auctions' as I was caught pretty a few months ago in the same 'chatter castle' you refer to. While you haven't mentioned any names, I am sure I could walk right in with your reporter, as no other clan could use the same 'line' this one you refer to does. You have sure got their number, and I have a manuscript set which I paid $5 for that ordinarily I wouldn't buy at a bargain outlet for 25 cents. However, we live to learn. Here's wishing your paper continued success." Gordon H. Tucker of Atlantic street, Atlantic, wrote:

Martha Lee, who with Jean Stinson, will be hostess at the big twin birthday parties of the WNAAC American Women's Club to be held in the parlors of the Boston Evening American on April 7 and April 8, is anxious to have members who sing or dance or are talented in any other way, volunteer their services for the two days.

Attention is called to the fact that through a typographical error the date of the second party was originally given as April 16, and that it is the correct date.

Those wishing to take part in the entertainment are requested to volunteer by writing to Martha Lee at the Boston Evening American. The list of those who have volunteered is especially requested to place their daughters' names on the program.

Full particulars of the party will be broadcast daily from station WNAAC and also will be printed on the magazine page of the Boston Evening American. As the number of tickets issued must necessarily be limited, only one will be given each member. The members are asked to give their membership number when applying for their ticket.

The entertainment by the members and their daughters will be scheduled to between 10 and 11:30 a.m. appearing at the leading Boston theatres.

Gifts for those who get around for as long as they did. I have seen working men spend $100 and twenty dollars within a half hour and receive a lot of worthless trinkets.

The auctioneer refused to put the articles up at separate auction, but forced one to participate in a so-called "advertising campaign" in order to secure the objects he would like to own.

Although the several auction stalls around the city are operating under as many separate names, I operated by one big syndicate. The stock is identical in every detail in the several stores. So also is the auctioneer's "trick" word for work, the same. The auctioneers themselves are transferred from one stall to another every day or two.

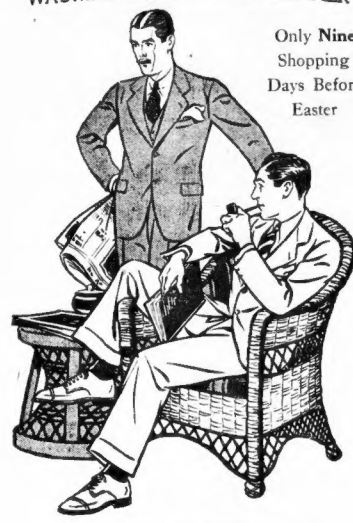

I am glad that in exposing some of the shady practices which are hurting legitimate business and taking the hard-earned money of working men or their wives under such fraudulent pretenses. In this case, as well as that of exposing the crack medicine, the service in protecting the wage earners from these impostors.

A Virile, Human Story of a Girl of Today

The Story Thus Far

LIKE a tired gull to a ship's rigging came Barbara Brown out of the New Year's blitzard to the jewel house in Ryebeck, where J. B. Hardiman was wont to indulge his overindulgent fancy for youth and beauty. She stayed that night and woke to find herself mistress of the place—at a price. Rather than pay the price, Barbara, one chill night, stole the gardener's clothes, fled from the house of tribulations and found herself on the high road, a broker, even to the clothes, of the men of haberdashery whose life she was to lead. She adopts an alley cat as mascot.

A NEWSBOY, busy before the sun, had hurried the message at Barbara's doorway. She only unfolded the sheet, speculating on the message to which she might not be the subject's property. "It's stealing," she warned herself.

But she put into immediate execution a conception of a new out of fundamental instinct and need. Had she been a girl, she would have slipped her hand from the door and across a them gingerly with her fingers. She wrapped her feet in folds of the newspaper. Comfort is a relative thing. A warmth which the editor had never been and to put at his best impression editorially spread from her toes to her head. Of the rest of the house of Mr. Caspary she made back and forth under the door, when she felt into the folds.

When she stood again she was shod for a man's pants contents.

As she slid off the porch into shadow, a light wagon disturbed the far-drawn quiet of the Village street. The car, now hardened to the ways of luxury, sped on the driver's man as he placed the family quart before the door. She boldly embraced the plan of a further felony.

The milk was good. It washed the taste of fear from her tongue.

"You won't have milk, good people," she nodded at the friendly door. "But then I won't have oatmeal."

She went on her way, unrepentant. Give her more fax.

"If democracy is to be made a success it will be necessary to infuse into it a spiritual ideal, a moral code, which has been lacking. That spiritual ideal is the Spirit of Sportsmanship."

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

BOSTON, THURSDAY, APRIL 1, 1925

The promoters of the Sportsmanship Brotherhood would have men play the game of life, of commerce, of international relations, in the spirit of true sportsmanship, with "Fair Play for All, and a Sporting Chance for the Under Dog."

New England Calls to the People of the World to 'Play the Game of Life Fairly!'

AT ONE OF THE shore resorts for which New England is famous there was held last year a rowing race in which the contestants were mere boys, young fellows who had yet to trouble the barber with any order less than a haircut.

With the race half-way ended, one of the boats had a splendid lead, but was steering a course which inevitably would bring it to the wrong side of the mark, and therefore entail disqualification.

Boys in the boat behind, observing the error of their rivals, yelled to the leaders until the latter saw their mistake and corrected their course.

To the boys in that second boat success meant nothing unless it should be a success achieved by merit.

Well?

Well, is there any other sort of true success?

Is the business man a genuine success who achieves a fortune by unscrupulous methods, unfair towards his competitors, his customers and those from whom he buys?

Is the professional man a success who has made his way up the ladder only as he has knocked some of his professional brethren down?

Is the politician a success whose continuance in place and power would be impossible except for the slanderous "whispering campaigns" he conducts against better and cleaner men?

The true sportsman, and everybody else who knows the difference between what is clean and fair and what is yellow and unfair, will answer each question with a most emphatic negative.

And there, in a few words, is the gospel of the recently organized Sportsmanship Brotherhood, about which New England has been reading for the past few weeks.

These gentlemen, all but one of them New Englanders, and the exception an Old Englander, stress the importance to humanity of the Spirit of Sportsmanship.

Their ideal is a high one, indeed. Shorn of technical sporting phraseology, it represents the attitude towards our fellows which was laid down in the Sermon on the Mount. "Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets."

In other words, Fair Play for ALL!

That, these New England gentlemen say, is what the world is craving for. They see it sated with strife and wrangling and discord. Humanity, they declare, yearns for a constructive, practical, simple ideal which can be made the goal of the daily rounds of duties, the common task, the little things which are so much more difficult than the big things of life.

An exalted ideal, you may say, but tell us if high ideals were ever more needed by the world at large than they are needed today.

And so, with ideals like these, the Sportsmanship Brotherhood announces its primary purposes and proclaims its code of honor for the sportsmen of all nations. Its immediate objectives are two: First, to promote international sport among the workmen of all countries.

Second, to foster the spirit of sportsmanship in the rising generation.

Almost as brief is the code of honor of a sportsman, as formulated by the brotherhood:

He keeps the rules.

He keeps faith with his comrades and plays the game for his side.

He keeps himself fit.

He keeps his temper.

He keeps from hitting a man when he is down.

He keeps his pride under in victory.

He keeps a stout heart in defeat and accepts it with good grace.

He keeps a sound soul, a clean mind and a healthy body.

The gentlemen who have taken it upon themselves to spread this gospel believe, they say, that it is up to the true sportsmen of the world to bring peace to all the nations.

"And it is up to America," they declare, "to lead the way. America holds the Yachting Cup, the Polo Cup, the International Horse-racing Cup and most of the championships in games and athletics. The United States is the largest country, the biggest nation. A gesture from the sports-

BOYHOOD'S BATTLEGROUND

Nothing like sports and games to test a fellow's pluck, honor, sincerity and sense of the square deal. It is not winning the game that counts, so much as winning fairly and honestly.

"I have great faith that men in general want to do the right thing and are always willing to respond to the best when they understand."

"I know that every boy in America wants to play the game—whatever game it is—according to the rules; therefore it is important that he know the rules."

"You emphasize the importance of controlling one's temper. Self-control is a victory in itself. But there is a difference in victories and I am sure the Sportsmanship Brotherhood will instill into the minds of young people the desirability of winning a glorious victory, not merely winning."

"In Booth Tarkington's play, 'Monsieur Beaucaire,' the leading character poses as a barber who always did the right thing, and when tempted to do otherwise would say to himself or to those who were trying to tempt him, 'Monsieur Beaucaire always is fair, always fair.'"

"I wish every success to an organization which has for its object giving to the youth of the country the ideal of playing fair, 'always fair.'" men of America would have far-reaching and immediate reaction.

—Governor Fuller, on the Ideals of the Sportsmanship Brotherhood.

"But the gesture must not come from the privileged and wealthy few. There are just as good sportsmen among the workmen as among the millionaires. Let the workmen-sportsmen of the United States get together with those of other nations, make friends and achieve the mutual understanding and respect which comes with healthy competition, in which the mask, the finesse and the ulterior motive of the politician have no place."

The pioneer and moving spirit of the Sportsmanship Brotherhood is Mr. John P. Bowditch, whose experiment in athletics in the schools of Framingham, begun some six years ago, has led the Brotherhood to consider seriously the plan of a "Spirit of Sportsmanship" prize for every school in New England.

In 1919, the school authorities of Framingham, in common with school authorities everywhere, were noting with considerable anxiety the dangers that were cropping up in connection with school athletics. There was grave concern over the question of the proper control of these activities.

Mr. Bowditch, desirous as always of being of help in a matter of community importance, offered two awards, known as the Millward Farm

Sportsmanship Prizes, to be presented annually to students of the Framingham High School and the Jonathan Maynard School.

These Millward Farm Prizes, Framingham reports, are not only the prizes most eagerly coveted by the pupils, but are the prizes that Framingham parents are most desirous to have their children win.

And why? Because they appreciate that these prizes are NOT awarded on the basis of athletic prowess ALONE.

Each teacher submits to the principal of the school the names of three pupils. The principal lists these names according to the number of votes the candidates have received and sends his graded list to the Athletic Council, which is made up of the superintendent of schools, the principal of the high school, the faculty manager, the coaches, one member of the School Committee and four citizens.

The merits and claims of the several candidates are discussed by the Council with teachers, coaches, and others in a position to form an opinion of the characters of the young people, and on the result of this investigation the Athletic Council bases its award of the Millward Farm Prizes.

The object of this method of selection is to make sure that a balance may be struck of the scholastic attainments of the pupil, his athletic prowess and his general character, with reference to what may be described as his "conduct towards his neighbor."

A Millward Farm Prize, as it happens, has never yet been won by a "star" athlete, but in every case has gone to a boy whose contributions to the morale of his school, as well as his spirit and earnestness in athletics, have been of demonstrated value.

It is something quite like this spirit that the Sportsmanship Brotherhood would bring into the every-day affairs of men, into the relations of business and professional men, one with another, into the intercourse between city and city, State and State, one government with another, one people with another, the wide world over.

Sports and games, Mr. Bowditch and his associates hold, are the best safety-valves yet devised to satisfy the insatiable pugnacity of man.

"In early times," they remind us, "men did not kill each other. They were entirely absorbed in struggling with Nature for the bare necessities of existence. This involved some fighting, to be sure, for always on their flank were the wild beasts."

"As man developed a margin of energy, after bare necessities had been gained, he turned his attention to killing his fellow-creatures. And the more highly civilized he has become the more wholesale the destruction of human life."

"It is vitally important, therefore, to supply him with a safety-valve for his insatiable pugnacity, and the BEST safety valve is offered by the combination of sports and games."

"Taken by and large, a normal man does not want to kill another man, IF HE KNOWS HIM, even though he may not like him very much. And if he understands the other fellow's point of view he will be tolerant and quite content to abide by the motto, 'Live and let live.'"

"The BEST way for men of different nationalities to get under each other's skin is through sports and games. The politicians, the diplomats and other partisans wear masks and each is where he is in order to jockey the other fellow and get as much as he can for his own side, REGARDLESS OF FAIR PLAY. 'No question is ever settled until it is settled right.' That is to say, on the basis of fair play. And fair play can be learned best through sports and games."

"If the peace of the world is to be made secure two things are necessary:

"1.—To get the democracies to know and understand each other PERSONALLY, on a scale as large as possible.

"2.—To inculcate in the democracies of the world the SPIRIT OF SPORTSMANSHIP, 'Fair Play for ALL, and a Sporting Chance for the Under-dog.'"

Just one word about the organization of the Sportsmanship Brotherhood. Among the charter members are Mr. Bowditch, Charles Sumner Bird, Jr., Colonel Blanton Winship, U. S. A., Dr. Morton Prince, Dr. David J. Evans, Julian Codman, George B. Morrison, Henry H. Chamberlin, John S. Lawrence, Dr. A. W. Rowe, Henry S. Thompson, Rudolph Weld, E. D. Benet, Philip W. Wrenn, William C. Prout, Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., Barrett Andrews, Herbert C. Leeds, John R. Thayer, Nat F. Ayer, John A. Blanchard, Albert Geiger, Richard E. Danielson, W. Irving Bullard, D. Basil O'Connor, Carl Shradler, John B. Shearer, John R. Macomber, Charles H. Taylor, Nason Hamlin and Captain Percy Redfern Creed, of the Boston Evening American, secretary.

It is the present plan of the Brotherhood not to create elaborate machinery, with a large membership, but to function as a clearing house and intelligence centre for all ORGANIZATIONS which may wish to join in the movement to promote the Spirit of Sportsmanship.

Is America ready? Are other New Englanders prepared to join with the gentlemen named, in showing the way? If so, they must step on the gas and not be too backward about coming forward. Already the workers of Germany are making plans for a series of Workers' Olympics at Frankfurt, in the coming June.

Further information about the Sportsmanship Brotherhood may be obtained by those who desire it upon application to the secretary, Room 915, No. 50 Congress street, Boston.

Dr. Crane's article will be found on Page 9. Helping Hand on Page 17.
